HOD'S DESK

Dr G. Manavendra
Professor and Head of Department

The National Education Policy 2020 (NEP 2020) implementation is committed to bringing about revolutionary changes in academic infrastructure by nourishing academic institutions in order to build robust academic machinery and establish an everlasting learning environment of internationally recognized standards.

The new curriculum is aligned with the skill qualification framework, and formative assessment will be used instead of summative assessment, as was previously done.

Mechanical Engineering (ME) has a broader application, particularly in the design and manufacturing industries. Modern society currently has a significant need for experienced engineers due to emerging technologies. Because of this, the demand for highly trained engineers with backgrounds in mechanical engineering can only be met in institutions with highly complex infrastructure, including laboratories, workshops, and quality educational programmes.

The Skill Development Centre is designed to provide our students with hands-on training in the latest technology, tools, and techniques used in the industry. We have invested in state-of-the-art equipment and software to ensure that our students are prepared to meet the demands of the modern workplace.

We have introduced new machinery and equipment, including CNC machines, 3D printers, including five axis machine. These machines and equipment are state-of-the-art and enable our students to learn the latest skills and techniques in mechanical engineering.

In addition to the new equipment, we have also introduced new courses and training programs in collaboration with industry experts. These programs are designed to enhance the employability of our students and provide them with the skills and knowledge required to excel in their careers.

Overall, the Skill Development Centre at the Mechanical Engineering Department has been successful in providing our students with practical, hands-on experience in various areas of mechanical engineering. We will continue to enhance our facilities and introduce new courses and programs to ensure that our students remain at the forefront of the industry.
